The Condition of The Dry Goods Trade.

The House of Dan Will & Co. Represented in the Eastern Market.

There has not been so good a ime for retail dealers to buy Goods in New York City and Philadelphia as at present. The present prices of Dry and other Goods compared with those which existed previous o the financial panic are fully 10 and 12 per cent. less. Since the panic the sales of those large establishments have been comparatively few, the stock in the various departments showing no very sensible diminution, the consequence is, that all the Houses have a larger stock of Fall Goods on hand than they ever had at this period of the year; and as Winter is fast approaching, they, to make room for the Winter Stock, have made a great reduction in the prices of the goods, in order to induce retail dealers to purchase.

Now, AARON WILL, of the firm of DAN. WILL & Bros., who is now in that market looking around, will have the best opportunity to buy a grand stock of the most stylish and seasonable Goods at greatly reduced figures for this market. He not only has the advantage of the low wholesale but of the panic prices. The assortment of Goods will be the cheapest ever brought to this county.

THERE has been considerable talk, during the past year, among the people of Allensville, in the western part of this county, about Dr. J. B. Drake, a married man, who has practiced medicine almost one bath morning, by the Rev. Mr. and a half years in the village and vicinity, paying numerous visits to to the residence of a certain prominent widow lady who also resides in the place. It is said that the visits to the lady's residence were unnecessary, and that the lady in question positively declined to have the visits discontinued, but in regard to the parties being criminally intimate we are not advised. Last TIMES Thursday night the Dr. was again absent from home. At noon the next day-Friday, the 17th-he was seated at the dinner table in his own house, when he arose up from the table, and made a desperate effort to murder his wife. He struck her with the chair on which he was sitting, knocking her down, and then severely kicked her a number of times. GREAT EXCITEMENT IN ZALESKI.-Once in a great while the people of Zaleski become excited, but the present cause of tumult is worthy of note. The Dry Goods House of WILL & Co., is represented in the New York and Philadelphia markets by a person who understands how to select goods for this market how to select goods for this market and who will take an advantage of the present panic prices. They will very soon begin to spread before the public a stock of goods embracing every variety of Dry and the north west quarter, and the north west quarter, and the north west quarter of the north west quarter, and the north west quarter of the north west quarter of Section 31, Township 9, Range 19.
